October 21, 2009

UCSD South Bay hosts ribbon-cutting ceremony accompanied by distinguished local politicians, physicians and community members

UCSD Radiation Oncology South Bay, located in Chula Vista, CA, held an official grand opening ceremony for its state-of-the-art radiation therapy cancer treatment center today. The event was highly attended by local politicians, physicians, and community members. Guest speakers at the event included Mayor Cheryl Cox of Chula Vista, Assemblymember Marty Block, Supervisor of San Diego County Greg Cox, and a representative from Assemblymember Mary Salas' office, Ralph Dimarucut. The speakers all shared in UCSD Radiation Oncology South Bay's excitement to bring state-of-the-art cancer care to residents of South Bay.

UCSD South Bay's staff welcomed all guests to tour the new facility. In addition to the guest speakers, there were several other noteworthy attendees at the grand opening, including Councilman Mitch Thompson of Chula Vista, Caridad Sanchez from US Senator Barbara Boxer's office, Victoria Ikerd-Schreiter from State Senator Denise Ducheny's office, Wayne Lucero on behalf of Congressman Bob Filner, and the current CEO of the Chula Vista Chamber of Commerce, Lisa Cohen.

A number of representatives from UCSD were also in attendance, including Tom Jackiewicz, Associate Vice Chancellor and CFO, UCSD Health Sciences, Mona Sonnenshein, Interim CEO UC San Diego Medical Center and DeAnn Marshall, Chief, Health Sciences and Communications Officer.

UCSD Radiation Oncology South Bay center manager Teresa Langley, Dr. Ramez Farah and the rest of the UCSD Radiation Oncology South Bay staff thank all guests for attending the opening ceremony.
